

The major takeaway is that flight cancellations have a disproportionately large impact on operational costs.